

GUNDLACH BUNDSCHU

EST. 1858

November 23 & 24, 2009
Wine Library TV #773 & 774
2008 Gewürztraminer - 91 points
"Extremely well made. An enormous amount of intriguing spices, white pepper. I love this baked apple flavor. Its got great acidity on the back-end. It is quite Alsatian-like. Really exceptional."

2005 Vintage Reserve - 90 points
"Not over the top. I like this, this is more for a Bordeaux drinker. I like the velvety aspect." - Gary Vaynerchuck

September 7, 2009
Gundlach Bundschu became the 12th winery to earn the green business certification of Sonoma County for efforts made to conserve water and energy as well as decrease waste. The business also made efforts to increase its recycling program and reduce its pollution.

San Francisco Chronicle

Family's Vines have Deep Roots
Three Stars = Excellent (out of possible four)
Sunday, July 25, 2010

The Bundschus are roaring into their sixth generation. That's 152 years of winemaking roots for Gundlach Bundschu in Sonoma, cementing its de facto status as the oldest family-owned winery in California. Today, the principles are Jeff Bundschu, the convivial president, and his equally gregarious father, Jim. Theirs is a family that wants visitors to have fun, because, well that's what they're having. It all goes back to the grapes, though, and Gundlach Bundschu has been planting them since the 1850s, serving as pioneers in farming and marketing for Sonoma and beyond.

Vineyard & Winery Management
Jan/Feb 2009 Cover Story
An old winery learns new tricks
With an astute blend of vision, talent and technology, Bundschu has proven that Gun Bun, the next generation, will continue to create wines that boldly go where no wine has gone before.

GunBun's 150th Plays to Rave Reviews
December 2008

August 2009
"Spicy, lychee nut and rose petal-like notes, a ripe medium-bodied, dry crisp style, and an authentic Gewürztraminer personality. Enjoy it over the next year." - Robert Parker

The Do List Friday, June 4, 2010
"Lots of wineries offer music programs aimed at affluent boomers, but here is something new: a festival at Gundlach Bundschu Winery in Sonoma for the independent music crowd over 21. Usually in wineries you hear big acts and old acts from the 80s, but this is a great chance to hear some indie music. The Huichica Music Festival at Gundlach Bundschu Winery." - host Cy Musiker & David Weigand, SF Chronicle executive features editor

Worth

The Cultivator: Jeff Bundschu
Feb/Mar 2009
Bundschu shifted the winery to focus on superpremium estate wines, halving it's annual output to produce a higher quality, more profitable product.

Legendary Vineyards of Sonoma
October 16, 2008
6. RHINEFARM - This vineyard at the southeastern point of Sonoma Valley stretches from the valley floor near Carneros up the Mayacamas Mountains, with soils ranging from volcanic clay and gravel.

Time in a Bottle
Summer 2008 Cover Story
150 Years of Gun Bun Fun
It was their willingness to insert tongue in cheek that helped secure Gundlach Bundschu's place in the industry (That, and some very, very good wines.)

